Athena 1967

Volume I, Number I
Lansing Community College
Lansing, Michigan

From the President

College traditions evolve slowly and are difficult to pass on from one class to another.

The "Athena," in this its first issue, strives to tell pictorially what Lansing Community College has meant to each of us during this College year. The quality of this yearbook is a credit to the yearbook staff, the students and the College.

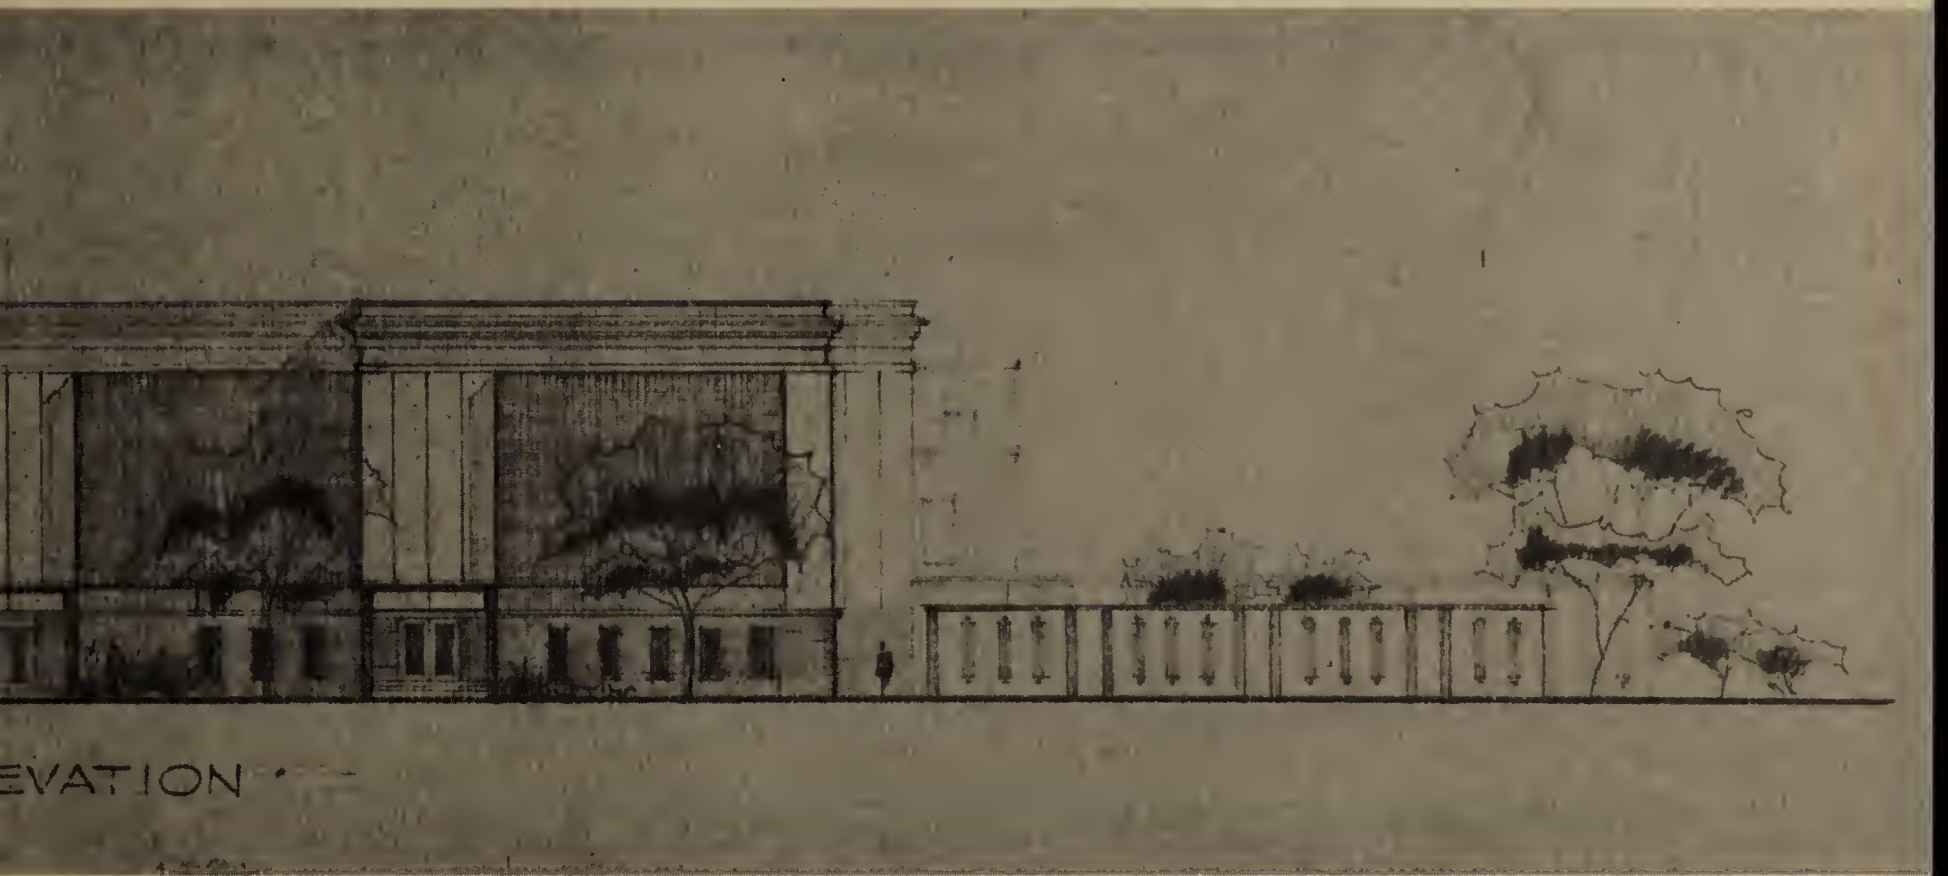

President Philip J. Gannon

For Next Year,

Extensive remodeling of Old Central, both inside and out, will begin this summer, by the beginning of next fall term, the building will look much like this artist's sketch. The major

a New “Old Central”

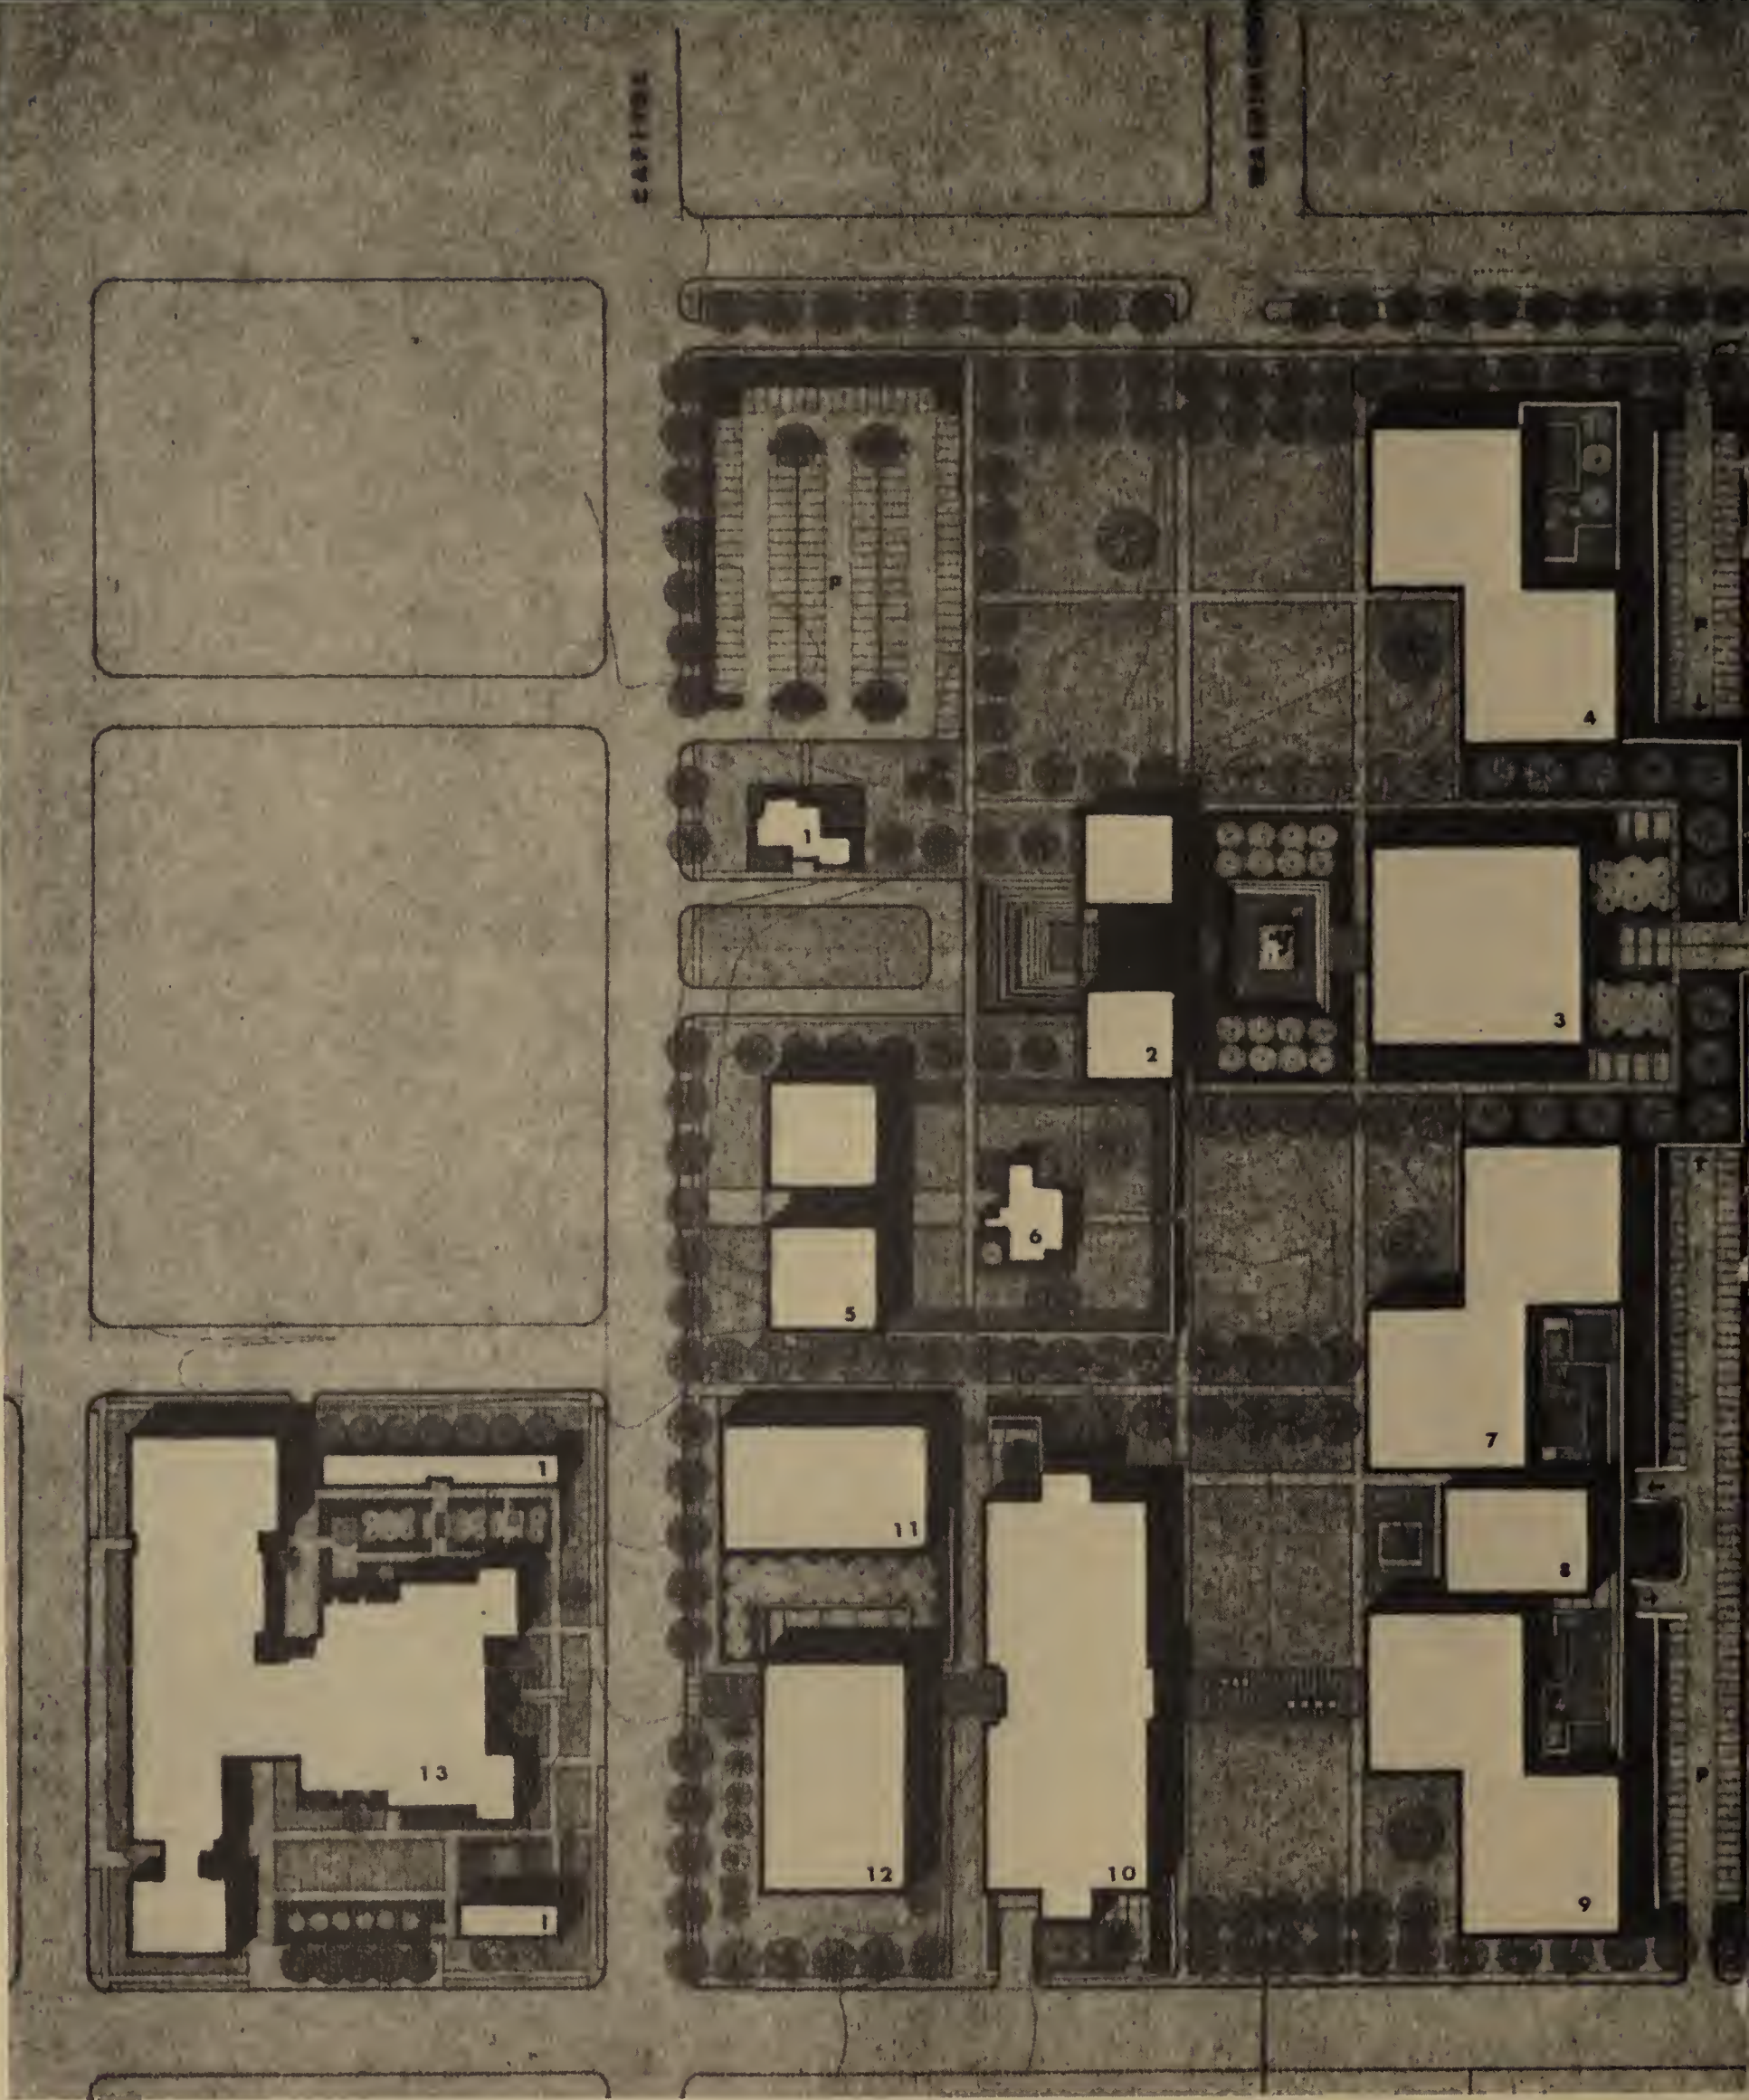

changes will be refacing of the exterior of Old Central and complete remodeling of corridors.

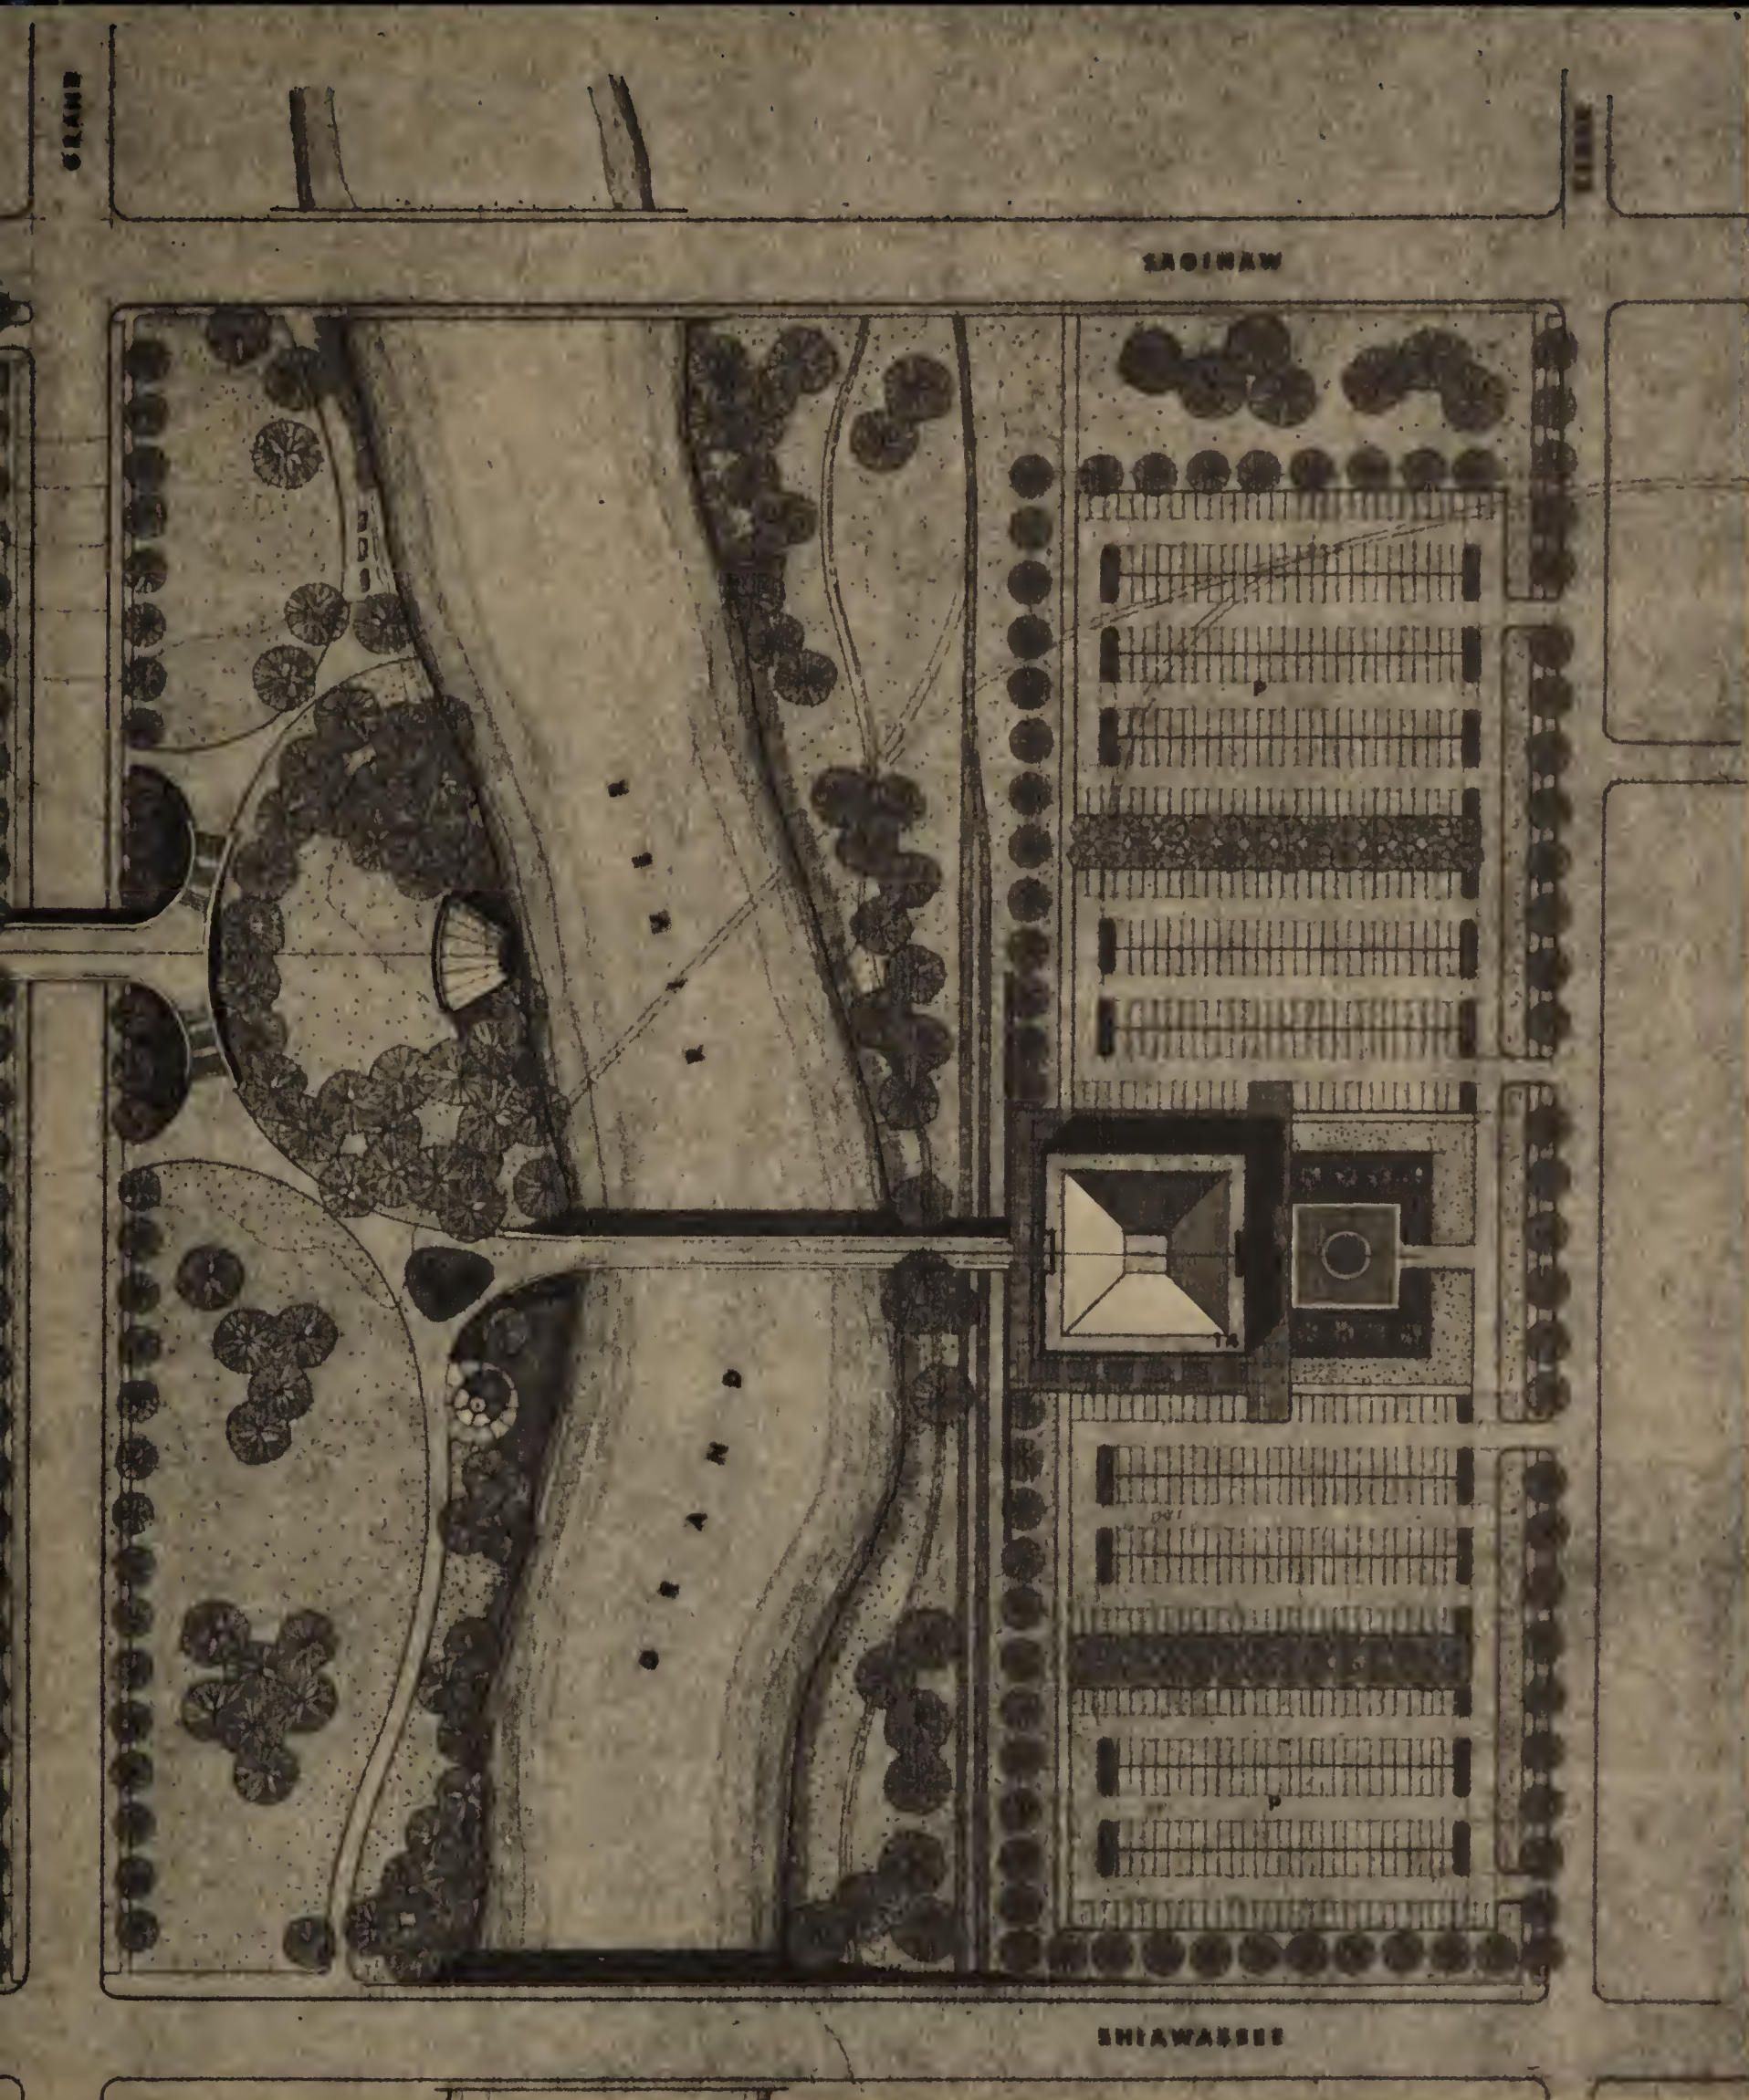

New Class Unit Readied for '68

The first new classroom building for Lansing Community College is the Health Sciences—Liberal Arts unit now being constructed on Washington Avenue. The new unit will increase the capacity of the College by more than 2,000 students and is planned for completion in 1968.

The campus of Lansing Community College will eventually include the buildings and landscaped areas shown above. Now under construction is a Health Sciences—Liberal Arts Center (#10) scheduled for completion in 1968.

Other major buildings include a Fine Arts Auditorium (#12) planned for completion in 1969, a Vocational—Technical Complex (#7, 8 and 9) planned for 1970 and an Intramural Building planned for 1972. Student parking areas will be included around the Intramural Building.

Members of the Board of Trustees are,
TOP ROW, Treasurer Cecil E. MacDonald,
 Secretary David D. Diehl, BOTTOM ROW,
 Trustee John H. Dart, Chairman Lee A.
 Trumble, Trustee David L. Froh and Treasurer Albert C. Boyd.

A Queen Is Crowned

Patricia Copp was crowned Miss Lansing Community College of 1967 in the annual pageant. Above, she receives congratulations from Myra Brackins, Miss L.C.C. of 1966. Pixie, as the new queen is called by friends, received a $100 scholarship to continue her education. First runner-up Pam Strickland is shown with Pixie on the opposite page, upper left, and second runner-up Carol Meatan with the queen, upper right.

Looking at all these smiles one would think all these caeds were crowned Miss L.C.C. The ten candidates for the title and their escorts are, TOP ROW, Patricia Capp and Gary Eby, Pam Strickland and Ran Miller, Peggy Haines and Jim Brack, Judy Maas and Steve Premer, Linda Daley and Pat Burke. BOTTOM ROW, Rita Grush and Dave Westal, Carol Meatan and Ran Anspach, Marianne Starnant and Jahn Pegg, Cecilia Mares and Jahn Opdyke, Velva McMullen and Ran Ansley.

Rehearse, practice and get the staging just right for the Miss Lansing Community College Pageant. And, when it's all over but the judging, relax for a minute.

Spring Term

Some Things Never Change

One of the original programs at Lansing Community College was the Practical Nurse Program, which offers training to men and women in a one-year course of instruction which leads to State certification as a Practical Nurse. This year Lansing Community College instituted a program for a two-year degree as a Registered Nurse. This program is open to both men and women and provides another opportunity for positions within the medical field.

Health Sciences Continue Growth

Studio Theater Goes on Stage

Highlights of the year for Studio Theater '66-'67 were presentations of "Three-Thousand Red Ants" (see opposite page), "The Long Christmas Dinner" and "Before Breakfast." During spring term, the group took "The Bremmen Town Musician" on tour of area schools.

To Create . . . and Win

This sculpture, opposite page, by William Thornton won both "Best of Show" and first place awards in the fourth annual Creative Arts Contest co-sponsored by Student Government and the Fine Arts Program. Janet E. Isham's acrylic painting, above, won first and the "L.C.C. Purchase Award."

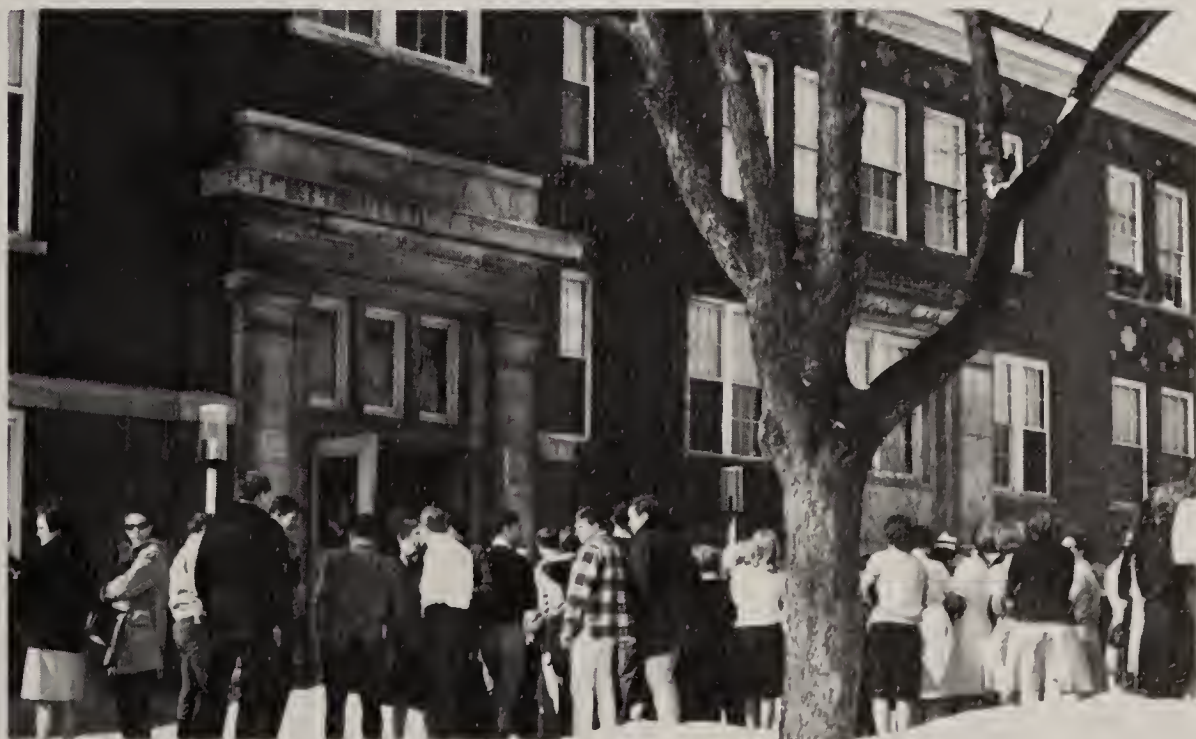

The Sound Enjoyed

Just kick off your shoes and enjoy the music in the Lansing Room.

Togetherness . . . of All Kinds

Out to Lunch

Day in and day out, the Cafeteria literally provided everything from soup to nuts.

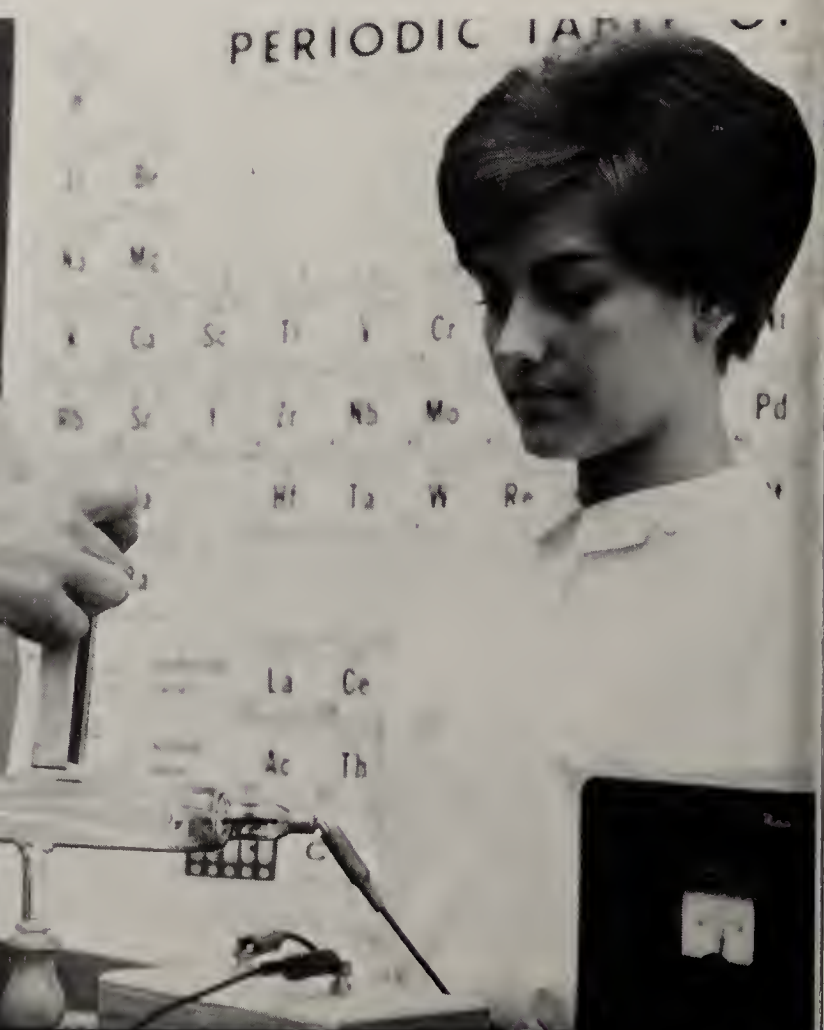

Learning . . .

at Lansing Community College goes from drafting tables . . . to language labs . . . and around the world . . . to Shakespeare . . .

from tabulators ... to test tubes ...
and from technologies to computers.

... and we'll all remember.
